SUNDAY, : : : : : : : OCTOBER 13, 1867

THE Radical majority last year in Ohio was 39,900. The most that the Democrats hoped before the election was to reduce this majority to fifteen or twenty thousand, and no Radical before the election, claimed less than twenty or twenty-five thousand. Instead of this, HAYES, their candidate, is elected by only about a thousand majority, negro suffrage, the vital issue made by the Radical party in the campaign is defeated by fifty thousand majority, and the Democrats have carried both branches of the Legislature. Farewell, BEN WADE! After this Congress the Senate will be relieved of your blasphemous presence. From Indiana, though nothing but mere county elections were held, the Democrats gain largely everywhere. In Pennsylvania the election of Judge SHARSWOOD, Democrat, is confirmed. In Iowa the Democratic gains are tremendous. In Connecticut, though mere town elections were held, the Democrats have gained five towns. In Newark, New Jersey, at an election for mayor, the Radicals suffer a loss of one thousand votes. From every point the news confirms the fact of a great reaction at the North, against the Radical conspirators. Whilst the effect of these elections will be at once demonstrated, their great practical influence will be the more evident, when the popular voice at the North is brought to bear directly upon the blatant Radicals who now control the Rump Congress. When this occurs the liberation of white people will ensue and the Union once more be so in reality as well as name. Then too comes our day of triumph, when the illegal legislation of the past years of misrule will be swept away and justice once more prevail. The unjust acts of the dominant destructionists will be effaced from the statute books, and the South be free from the tyranny and usurpation of its present accursed minority rulers.

Radicalism with loss of place and position in Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York will soon be lost and despised as a revolutionary thing of the past. Wisdom and justice will take its place, and all the obnoxious legislation of its fanaticism will go with it into obscurity. With this result in view, it is emphatically the duty of the South to not accept, except perforce, any of the provisions of the so called Congressional reconstruction measures; for, when the day of retribution comes, we must not have anything fastened on us that it will be inconsistent with any previous solemn action of ours to abrogate and destroy. The measures that an illegal legislation chooses to pin on us with bayonets, only lasts during the employment of force and the existence of such a power itself. The first act of a legitimate Conservative Congress will be to repeal all the disunion legislation of the present rump usurpers. Then, within the legitimate rulings of Constitutional liberties, we will become properly reconstructed, and once more be freemen and the equals, at least, of freedmen.

WILL the Conservative masses of the North, now that they have gained so great a triumph in Ohio and Pennsylvania, allow that unconstitutional mob, which pretends to call itself Congress, to continue its vindictive revolutionary course? As far as opportunity has offered they have said to that turbulent body you have done enough; you can go no further? They have spoken with a voice to be heard and felt. Would that we had the power to still further rouse their virtue and excite their patriotism—to inflame the love of liberty they have shown still lingers among the yeomanry of the North. The South is powerless. She cannot stay this tide of ruin. She cannot arrest this flood of evils with which the very altars of our liberty have been swept away. The eloquence of her HILL, speaking with the power of PATRICK HENRY, is unheeded. The earnest appeals of HERSCHELV JOHNSON are lost amid the frantic cries of the wildest fanaticism. The legal argument of SHARKEY is of no weight, though combining the most extreme patriotism with the soundest legal reasoning. The teachings of experience and the laws that govern human nature have been alike disregarded, and on, on they are still pressing a revolution, which threatens calamities still more frightful than those from which we are still suffering. To the wisdom, the patriotism, the self interest, and to the Caucasian blood of the North we appeal, and beg that they will, as they have done in Ohio and Pennsylvania, strangle the fierce demon which gloats with envenomed looks upon our ruin. Continue to say to the President that the Constitution shall not be utterly annihilated. Say to him that if impeached he shall not be suspended. Tell him to stand firm to the Constitution, and that you will stand firm to him. Tell him that negro rule must not, can not, shall not be allowed. Tell him that you fought for a Union with LEES and JOHNSTONS and FORRESTS, and not with CESARS and POMPEYS and CUFFEES of the South. As ANDREW JOHNSON stands upon the deck of the noble old ship of State, let the Northern heart continue to encourage him to save her from the breakers of fanaticism and misrule. Alone he stands where JACKSON stood. Would that God had given him the iron will of the hero of the hermitage. Ten noble States look up from their manacles, and with tearful eyes bid him stand firm. The mind, the refinement, the education, the morals, and the religion of the South, with universal accord, stand by the Constitution, and are loyal to all its noble principles. As to the people who are now in power over us, they are a servile population, unacquainted with the forms of law, with the principles of the Constitution, and utterly unprepared for self-government or for ruling over us. What would be thought of the generosity of a conqueror who would place a refined and civilized people under the rule of Esquimaux? Yet under a rule worse than this does Congress seek to place a people who, for noble principles, for exalted gallantry, for public worth and for private virtue are surpassed by none on the globe. With the deepest earnestness we point to the countenance and support the Constitution has received in the recent elections, and call on ANDREW JOHNSON to aid the brave men who are fighting with him in the cause of humanity and for a people distranchised and utterly unable to help themselves.

WHEN Mr. YANCEY returned from Europe, he was asked, "What regiment has gained the most reputation in England for its gallant fighting and soldierly bearing?" He answered, "The Fourth Alabama." That reputation was won upon the field of Manassas. Colonel EGBERT JONES was the commander. He was from Huntsville, where for many years he had wielded a powerful influence as a man of the finest talents, the purest patriotism, and the most exalted moral worth. He had served as soldier in the Mexican war, and had even then shown himself to be possessed of indomitable courage and superior ability to command. Upon the first call for volunteers, he gave himself to the cause of the South. He was immediately elected Colonel of the Fourth Alabama, and at once entered upon his duties as an inflexible officer, who knew nothing but his duty, his country and his God! His discipline appeared at first too rigid, and finding his men to be restive under it, he went to JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON and tendered his resignation. No, said his chief, we cannot spare you. "Colonel," said he, "this will all blow over, and your men will love you all the more for your firm rule. Retain your sword, and continue in your command." JONES returned, determined to do his duty. Tall and commanding in figure, firm in purpose, inflexible in will, and heroic in devotion, he set to work to have the best regiment in the South. Pale, self-denying, thoughtful, and apparently cold, he did not exert a mesmeric influence over his men. He, however, won their respect, secured their confidence and exacted their obedience. His pure life, his entire freedom from dissipation of all kinds, and his singleness of purpose, continued to win upon the generous Southern hearts of his men. He was a perfect soldier. Obedient to his superiors, kind to the private soldier, respectful to his equals, and generous to his foes, he was a model for both officers and men. It was in the first battle of Manassas that he led his men, and there he drove back regiment after regiment that was hurled against him. It was the first great battle of the war. He led his troops like a veteran commander, and they went into the fight like veterans. Terribly wounded, he refused to leave the field. With a thigh fearfully broken, exhibiting no sign of pain, he still continued at his post. Nor did he leave the saddle until both legs were fractured. These wounds were too much even for his stout constitution, and after a few weeks of suffering, borne with manly fortitude, he died on the field where he had fallen. Colonel JONES was of the most commanding presence. His noble form, fully six feet in hight, was set off by a head of large size and a countenance exhibiting intelligence, generosity, integrity and valor. Our heroes are not all gone. Our heroes still live. Their spirits still whisper hope to us who have survived the carnage of battle and the desolation of war.

WE regret to learn of the death of an old and highly respected citizen, and a cherished and true friend. Colonel JAMES B. THORNTON breathed his last on yesterday after a brief and painful illness. Colonel THORNTON was a native of Virginia, and represented the historic county of Caroline in the legislative councils of the Old Dominion. He removed to Memphis in 1847, and soon entered upon an honorable and creditable career at the bar. He was a legal author of distinction, and produced a standard work known to the lawyers of the country as "THORNTON on Conveyancing." During the war, notwithstanding his advanced age, he served faithfully in the armies of the Confederacy. No better citizen or better man has ever passed from among us.

A negro in Mississippi treated some of his cholera stricken brethren with figs and salt, as a medicine, and killed eleven of them.

From the Vicksburg Telegraph, of Thursday, we learn that there were six new cases of yellow fever for the twelve hours previous to twelve o'clock that day. No deaths.

The New York Herald of Wednesday says that unequivocal protest against the continued rule of the Radical party, anywhere or for any purpose, seems to be the substance of the decision given at the polls Tuesday in Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Honorable Charles G. Loving died in Beverly, Massachusetts, Wednesday. He was historic as the United States Commissioner who gave up the fugitive slave Anthony Burns. He was afterward Judge of the United States Court of Claims.

Mr. Justice Swayne, in the United States Circuit Court, decided, at Louisville, Thursday, the Civil Rights bill to be unconstitutional, and dismissed the motion for arrest of judgment in the case of Rhodes, Vickers et al., convicted of certain crimes under that bill upon negro testimony.

The movement which, it has been said, has been inaugurated by prominent Republican members of Congress, intended to secure harmony between the President and the Legislative bodies on the pending question of Southern reconstruction, is a creature of the New York Herald's fancy. Nothing else.

The Nashville Banner perpetrated a good joke on Friday, by publishing a dispatch from Cincinnati, saying: "For God's sake advise Brownlow to send his militia to our aid. The rebels have possession of the whole State, come to the aid of the negro, or all is lost," and signed Jno. D. Rentlate Captain Louisville Legion.

Judge Blatchford, in the United States District Court of New York, yesterday decided that in cases of seizures under the internal revenue laws, the shares of informers are determined by the regulations in force at the time the forfeited property is sold by the marshal, and cannot be affected by any regulation subsequently made.

The Washington correspondent of the Louisville Courier telegraphs that impeachment is dead. But two members of the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives, met to-day in the committee room, others are soon expected. The evidence has been printed, among it that of General Grant, who testified that President Lincoln read him a proclamation designed to restore North Carolina to her former relations within the Union, and that issued by Johnson was identical with Lincoln's. Secretary Stanton also testified that he had made a draft of such a proclamation, but mislaid it, and although he promised it, it has not been forthcoming.

The Bowling Green (Kentucky) Democrat states that a widowed lady named Blankenship, who lived in Allen county, Kentucky, lost her husband about two months ago, leaving her with the care of three children. On the 16th ultimo, while washing at a branch near her residence, her two oldest children (boys) were bitten by a rattlesnake. Their screams attracted her attention, and she ran to their assistance, finding one already dead and the other barely able to relate the circumstances. In her excitement she had left her little girl, just able to walk, and while she was with her boys this child fell into the washtub and was drowned. Thus within a few minutes was every child she had taken from her.

DIED.

The senior editor of the Bucyrus (Ohio) Journa was mobbed and beaten at the polls to-day, for presenting a colored man, about three-quarters white, to vote.

The Columbus (Georgia) Sun says: "We are grieved to hear of the death, on yesterday morning, at his residence in Wynton, of Colonel Bolling H. Holt, son of the late Hon. Hines Holt. Colonel Holt served with much distinction in the Confederate army during the war.

In the United States District Court in New York city, Tuesday, in the matter of the petition filed to compel the Memphis, El Paso and Pacific railway company to go into bankruptcy, the answer of the company was filed, and the court directed the issue of the insolvency and bankruptcy of the company to be tried by jury at the next stated session of the court.

The Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer telegraphs among those who called to rejoice with the President on the result of the elections were General's Sherman, Ewing, ex-Senator Stockton, of New Jersey, and many others. Sherman was particularly hearty in his congratulations. One of the results certain to follow this is a reconstruction of the Cabinet, which will meet with the approval of the people.

The Hon. A. H. Handy has resigned his position as Judge of the High Court of Errors and Appeals. He believes the high place to be trammelled by the presence of a military power which claims the right to eject a Judge by force from his position, and feels it repugnant to all his ideas of propriety to hold an office subject to the discretion of a military commander. Judge Handy's reasons must suggest their propriety to every high toned man in the country.

The Florence Journal says: "There will be another tournament at the city of Tuscumbia, on the 18th and 19th days of the present month. No knight will be allowed to enter the list of contestants for the prizes who is over the age of fifteen years. Each knight will be required to pay an entrance fee of two dollars. Admission to the grounds twenty-five cents. The capital prize, a fine silver watch, will be awarded to the knight taking the largest number of rings. Major S. D. Wall has been selected as orator.

AUCTION.

The Buntyn Tract at Public Sale.

DESIROUS of carrying out as speedily as possible the provisions of the Will of G. Buntyn, deceased, in the disposal of his Homestead Tract, WE WILL OFFER AT PUBLIC SALE the remaining portion of the Tract, consisting of about

SEVENTY-FIVE LOTS,

Varying from two to ten acres in size, embracing with the first lands all the wood land lots on the Tract.

The high reputation for the health which this locality enjoys, and the choice of easy and quick communication with the city by railway or dirt road, give to these lands advantages that cannot be appreciated to the business men of Memphis, as a cheap, convenient and pleasant point at which to establish their family residence, combining as they do all the advantages of town and country.

With the object of removing all difficulty in selling, we shall offer the property upon the following easy

TERMS—One fourth cash, balance in 6, 12, 18 and 24 months with interest. Warranty deeds given and deed of trust taken, waiving redemption.

EVERY LOT PUT UP WILL BE SOLD WITHOUT RESERVE. Plans of the lots may be obtained at the office of the Auctioneers; each lot being staked so as to be defined before the sale.

Sale will be upon the premises on WEDNESDAY, the 16th of October, 1867.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Our city patrons are requested not to pay any one for subscriptions to the AVALANCHE without a certificate from the office authorizing them to collect.

GALLAWAY, RHEA & CLUSKEY.

CALVARY CHURCH.—Services by Rev. George White, at eleven o'clock a.m. and half-past seven o'clock p.m.

CUMBERLAND PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—Rev. Dr. Davis will preach in this church to-day at eleven o'clock a.m.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH.—There will be no preaching at this church to-day, the pastor being absent at Nashville. The regular services will be at eleven o'clock a.m.

CENTRAL METHODIST CHURCH.—The revival meeting at the Central Methodist church, on Union street, still continues with increasing interest. There will be preaching to-day at eleven o'clock; also to-night at half-past seven.

Rev. E. A. Meaders (Old School Baptist), of Mississippi, will preach this (Sunday) morning, at eleven o'clock, in the Presbyterian church on the corner of Linden street, in South Memphis. Seats free. The public is cordially invited to attend.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.—There will be preaching in this church to-day at the usual hours, morning and evening, by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Miller. The Sabbath school meets at nine o'clock a.m., in the basement of the church, and the young men's prayer meeting in the same room at three o'clock p.m. The seats at this church are free, and the public are invited to attend all the services.

LAW COURT.—The regular October term commences on next Monday.

Mr. J. Ewin Goodwin, formerly of the AVALANCHE, arrived in this city last night, looking well. We are glad to see him restored to health.

The October term of the Law and Criminal Court will commence on Monday in the rooms in the Greenlaw Opera House block.

SHELBY CIRCUIT COURT.—Stands adjourned until the fourth Monday of the present month, when it will convene in special session for two weeks.

THE GRAND BALL.—For the benefit of St. Mary's (Catholic) Church has been postponed from Tuesday until Thursday next, the 17th instant.

The Milliken habeas corpus case will be determined on the return of Judge Swayze, which is expected on Tuesday next.

CRIMINAL COURT.—Meets on Monday; that day being the first of the regular October term of court, court will convene at the usual place at the usual time.

The Circuit Court adjourned yesterday to reassemble on the fourth Monday in this month, in the new court room provided for its sessions, on the corner of Union and Second streets.

The following telegrams remain uncalled for in the office: Mrs. A. L. Dyer, Benjamin D. Pullen, J. W. Ward, J. J. Cohen, Julius Nathan, L. J. Knowlton, S. Pfemfert.

The Municipal Court will be held henceforth in the new building on the corner of Union and Second streets. In consequence of the removal, no court was held yesterday.

CHANGED PLACES.—Father Coll, of St. Patrick's church, has been ordered to Nashville, and his place will be occupied by Rev. Mr. Walsh, of the latter city, whose parishioners part from him with great regret.

SHELBY AND HIS MEN.—A history of the war, written by Shelby's Adjutant General, Jno. M. Edwards. Persons desiring copies should apply to James H. Sullivan, AVALANCHE office, who alone has the right to sell the work in this city.

SHOOTIG.—A negro calling himself Jackson came to the city and procured a pistol and ammunition, and returned to the plantation of the late Sheriff Felts, five miles north of the city, and shot another negro, named Brown, with whom he had an altercation a few days previously. The shooting was fatal, the ball penetrating the breast of Brown, and causing almost instant death.

SICKNESS.—The portions of our city that have been most afflicted by the fatal sickness which has prevailed for about three weeks past, are Court and Jefferson streets extended, and Pigeon Roost road. There we learn there is little or no drainage, and in some localities the population is not of the character to sufficiently police their dwellings to ward off disease.

CHANCERY COURT.—The argument in the case of Harding vs Avery, occupied the time of the court during the entire of yesterday. It has not as yet been submitted.

The case set for trial on Monday is Duval vs Duval.

UNITED STATES COURT.—The argument in the case of Moore vs Howes, was heard on yesterday, and not being concluded up to the time of adjournment, was continued over to Monday next.

No other business was transacted during the day.

WEATHER.—The weather continues bright and clear, with a bracing atmosphere. Those who are not sufficiently regardful of the change, and still are thinly clad, are more or less liable to the autumnal diseases. Fire, morning and evening, are found comfortable, and are greatly inductive to health. Persons cannot be too careful of their health, especially at a season when chills and congestive fever may at any time seize upon those who think themselves entirely exempt.

NEW FIRM.—Morris, Lea & Co. have opened a house as cotton factors and commission merchants, at 225 Second street. Captain John A. Lea has been in business in this city for many years, and is too well known for comment. The other members of the firm, Messrs. George W. Morris, William M. Crawford and I. J. Walker, are from Fayette county, and are old farmers, and are well acquainted with the wants of the planting interests. Call on them.

RARE YAMS AND VIRGINIA POTATOES.—We take pleasure in acknowledging the receipt of a most acceptable present, a lot of the finest potatoes we have ever seen. They were grown by Mr. Wm. A. Eades, three miles from the city, on the State line road. Each one is sound of sufficient size to feed a family, and in flavor they could not be excelled. Mr. Eades has shown that he understands the culture of these esculents, and we hope many of our farmers will profit by his example.

Emmons & Son, No. 10 Jefferson and 393 Main street, have received Frank Leslie, Boys' and Girls' Weekly, Staats Zeitung, Home Journal, New York Weekly, London News, Weekly Times, Independent, Police News, London Punch, New York Clipper, Metropolitan Record, Irish People, Irish American, LaCrosse Democrat and a large supply of envelopes and papers. Everybody goes to Emmons & Son's: they know they can get the worth of their money. Everybody gets their reading matter at Emmons & Son's, Drop in and try them.

NEW MEMPHIS THEATER.—The triumph of Lady Don last evening, in the agreeable comedietta of "Mischief Making," was acknowledged by the audience in repeated bursts of applause. The burlesque of "Kenilworth" kept the house convulsed with laughter. It would be invidious to discriminate, where all so admirably travestied the characters drawn by the "Wizard of the North." To-morrow evening Lady Don will commence her second week with the beautiful drama of "Kathleen Mavourneen," interspersed with beautiful music and exquisite songs.

BAR MEETING.—The members of the Memphis Bar are requested to meet at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court, in the Postoffice block, at ten o'clock this (Sunday) morning, to take action in reference to the death of Colonel J. B. Thornton, who expired yesterday. There was no gentleman in this city who for high intelligence and strict integrity of character was held in greater esteem than Colonel Thornton. His death is considered a public calamity, and the elevated profession of which he was a most worthy member, will adopt suitable measures to pay due respect to his memory.

CHANGED QUARTERS.—Our old friend Mr. C. A. Beehn, so long and favorably known during his connection with the printing establishment of C. P. Chamberlain & Co., has withdrawn from his old quarters and connected himself with Bleick & Co., No. 315 Main street, just south of Monroe. He is known here as one of the neatest and most fancy job printers in the city, or who have ever made their home here, and those who have enjoyed his "good works" will be sure to follow him to his new field of labor. An advertisement will explain further particulars.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN JAMES COX.—The sudden demise of Captain Cox of the firm of Humphreys & Cox, commission merchants, Howard's Row, leaves a hiatus that cannot easily be filled. His home was Evansville, Indiana, and it was his intention to leave for home last week, but he delayed his departure, unfortunately, and was taken sick. His illness would not give way before the best medical attention, and we are compelled to chronicle his death. He was a gentlemen of enlarged views, a thorough business man, and his decease will be regretted by a large circle of friends and acquaintances, both here and at Evansville, where he had endeared himself by his generous qualities and those high virtues which distinguish the man of character from the common level.

CURRENT LITERATURE.—At Ed. Worsham's literary depot, in the AVALANCHE building, all the news of the day and current literature may be constantly found. The following are among some of the choice reading on hand last evening: Chimney Corner, Literary Album, Record, Waverley Magazine, Clipper, Sporting Times, Irish People, Irish Republic, Irish American, Freeman's Journal, Banner of Light, Boston Pilot, LaCrosse Democrat, Saturday Night, Field, Turf and Farm, Pleasant Hours, Chimney Corner, monthly, Emmons's Magazine, Land We Love, Wilkes' Spirit, etc. Our young friend "Cliff," will be on hand to do the agreeable and help every one to his wish.

FRANKLIN PRINTING OFFICE.—Among all the industrial typographical institutions in this city, none has ever been established on so firm a basis as that which is so well known as "the Franklin," of which Mr. S. C. Toof is proprietor and superintendent. He is himself a printer of the largest experience, has the finest and newest materials, and is content with a moderate profit on his work, which he always renders unexceptionable. For cards, circulars, bills—in fine, anything that types can represent—he is sure to make a fine job, especially when contrasted with the price. He has facilities for all colors, and can turn out the neatest job in the city. Those who have had their cards and circulars printed at Mr. Toof's Franklin printing office never feel the slightest inclination to carry their work to any other office. Whatever is promised will be fulfilled to the letter.

LADIES.—Don't fail to see Payne's fine stock of dress goods. 3t

EQUITABLE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Our people are so generally interested in the company whose name heads this article, that any notice of it, we know, will be read with interest. It must be especially gratifying to its numerous members to learn that the Knickerbocker continues to be eminently prosperous, and that notwithstanding the increased mortality in our midst and elsewhere, it has no deaths to report or losses to pay. Its accumulations are steadily increasing; each week swells the number of its policy holders, and prosperity attends its business. The fact is, there has never, to our knowledge, been any corporation having so extended a list of assured, that has escaped loss with such singular uniformity; and whether it is due to skillful management or to good fortune, its members have much cause for congratulation. We begin to grow superstitious, and have the conviction that the man whose life is insured in the Knickerbocker will surely live the full measure of "three score years and ten." It is a peculiar dogma of ours, but we believe it.

THE FEAST OF THE TABERNACLES.

Chag Haasewkos.

We dropped in a day or so since into one of the synagogues of the Hebrews of this city. It was during the last festival, and the reader of the law was engaged in reciting it to the assembled congregation. The reading was accomplished by a species of chant, combined with as fine an intonation and as grand and as solemn a swell and declension of the vocal organs as we have ever heard, and the old historic language in which the sense of the text was conveyed produced upon us an effect we never before experienced. Beautiful and sweet in its inflections, grand and solemn as the solitary midnight roar of the sea, sweeping into the ear, now as low and sweet as the dulcet intonations of the harp, then as loud and harsh in its gutterals as the brazen voice of the trumpet, it took the soul by storm, and carried us far back into the days when the poor Israelite shepherd proved his faith by his conflict with a Goliah, and by the act made for himself a name in Israel. A close student of the Bible will always cherish and admire these grand old ceremonies and festivals, which, inaugurated by Moses amid the scenes and associations of an almost nomadic existence of a nation, have come down to the present day almost entirely unshorn of their primeval beauty, impressiveness and simplicity. This appears to be the festival portion of the Jewish year, and for some time they have followed each other in rapid succession, and we append a few items in regard to its force and significance, for which we are indebted to the kindness of Mr. Frankland: On the 15th day of Tishy, corresponding with Sunday evening, the 13th day of October, the Israelites commemorate and celebrate the Feast of the Tabernacles, as we find in Leviticus, chap. 23, v. 33-4:

"And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying: 'Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, the fifteenth day of this seventh month shall be the Feast of the Tabernacles, for seven days unto the Lord. On the first day shall be an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work therein. Seven days ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the Lord. On the eighth day shall be an holy convocation unto you, and ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the Lord; it is a solemn assembly, and ye shall do no servile work therein. These are the feasts of the Lord, which ye shall proclaim to be holy convocations to offer an offering made by fire unto the Lord, a burnt offering and a meat offering, a sacrifice and drink offerings, everything upon this day, beside the Sabbath of the Lord, and besides your gifts, and besides all your vows, and besides all your farewell offerings which ye give unto the Lord.

"Also, on the fifteenth day of the seventh month, when ye have gathered in the fruit of the land, ye shall keep a feast unto the Lord seven days. On the first day shall be a Sabbath, and on the eighth day shall be a Sabbath, and ye shall take you, on the first day, a beautiful fruit of the tree (called in Hebrew, Etrog, a species of citron) branches of palm trees, and branches of the thick leaved tree (the myrtle), and willows of the brook; and ye shall rejoice before the Lord your God, seven days; and ye shall keep it a feast unto the Lord seven days in the year. It shall be a statute forever in your generations. Ye shall celebrate it in the seventh month. Ye shall dwell in booths, that your generations may know that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths, when I brought them out of the land of Egypt. I am the Lord, thy God. "And Moses declared unto the children of Israel the feast of the Lord. Lev. 16, v. 16 and 17: "Three times in a year shall all thy males appear before the Lord, thy God, in the place which he the Lord shall choose; in the feast of unleavened bread, (Chag Hamatoows,) and in the feast of weeks, (Chag Hasho vos-ous,) and in the feast of Tabernacles, (Chag Haas-evkos,) and they shall not appear before the Lord empty; every man shall give as he is able, according to the blessing of the Lord, thy God, which he hath given thee."

The feast of the unleavened bread is called "Zeman Chirusaynon," the time of liberty or emancipation. The feast of the weeks is called "Zeman Mastan Sowrosaynee," the time of the receiving of our God, and the Feast of the Tabernacle is called Zeman Simchosaynu—the time of our rejoicing—which should not consist only in feasting, but also in religious rejoicing, whereof the time of the Feast of the Tabernacle is the most proper, being only four days after the day of Atonement, wherin the Hebrew is confident the God of Israel has pardoned all their past errors and transgressions, and that they are fully restored to his favor. No doubt allusion was made to this feast in Ecclesiastics, ch. 9 v. 7, where the people are told to "go and eat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart, for God has already accepted thy works." The command is "to rejoice in the feast, and also to cause the poor and needy to rejoice," as we find in Deuteronomy, chap. 6, v. 14: "And thou shalt rejoice in thy feast; thou and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy man servant and thy maid servant, and the Levite, the stranger, the fatherless and the widow that are within thy gates." In this verse he is reminded by his God: I made thy feast to rejoice, viz.: thy son, thy daughter, thy man servant and thy maid servant, be therefore not ungrateful, but make my four to rejoice, viz.: the Levite, the stranger, the fatherless and the widow. The taking of the four different species, the citron (Etrog), palm tree (Lulav), myrtle (Hadassim), and the willow (Shainas), are explained typically by the learned commentators, but the first and plain reason of this precept is that the Feast of Tabernacles is also called the Ho. Oasif," the feast of the harvest, and the taking of the above four species, every one the best of its genus, will stimulate the rejoicing, and render thanks to God for the abundance of the harvest.

THE JAPANESE.—Marshall & Doyle's celebrated Mikado troupe of Japanese, comprising twenty-four male and female performers, will open at Greenlaw Opera House on Tuesday next. These people are truly pronounced the "marvels of the nineteenth century," and from the time they made their debut at the Academy of Music, New York, to their appearance in St. Louis during the past week, the press have been loud in their praises of their wonderful performances. The San Francisco Times, in alluding to their first appearance on this continent, remarks: "It is evident there is as much difference between them and their predecessors in point of skill as between Leotard and Hanlon and a street tumbler. They have amply vindicated their right to be considered the best troupe that has left Japan, and altogether the most wonderful. They will present their feats of juggling top spinning, rope walking, tumbling, balancing, and many others too numerous to mention. We can only say to our readers, go and see for yourselves. The troupe comprises four women, the first ever seen in this country, and four children, said to be marvels of grace, skill and endurance. They will give a family matinee on Saturday afternoon.

A HARD CASE.—There came to this city, some time since, a negro woman with eight children, named Becky Pullen. She had been raised, and had lived, in the neighborhood of Somerville, Georgia, and left there, like thousands of other unfortunate creatures, to enjoy the pleasures and excitements of a city life. It was hard to make a living for her eight children in the country, but she thought it could easily be done in a city. So to her, and to most other negroes who have never been away from the cotton patch or the corn field, everything pertaining to city existence assumes the color de rose, until sad, bitter experience, and in this case, shows them the fallacy of their reasoning. Becky came here; she sought employment, but found none; the glowing tales which had been told her of the philanthropy of the Harbour Lewises and the other great lights of negrophobia in this city paled before the experience of actual facts, and Becky found herself without money, without friends, and without bread, and the sole dependence of eight children. She took up her abode in a shanty in the suburbs, and for sometime eked out a miserable existence, until sickness overtook herself. Assistance was given her by some of her neighbors, not, however, of the white Radical persuasion; but even this dropped off, and finally she died from utter want and destitution. All she had she gave to her children, and allowed herself to suffer, until physical prostration and actual want resulted in her death yesterday. The Coroner's jury returned a verdict in accordance with the facts, and yesterday she was interred in a pauper's grave. Several sympathetic citizens have taken care of the children, and intend to raise them. One of them, however, her oldest, is about dead with the dropsy, and she was sent, yesterday, to the hospital, where, no doubt, she will be well cared for.

ELSON BROS.—The mammoth cheap store of Elson Bros. is still doing a retail business, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding. We understand the firm desire to close out the retail stock as soon as possible, but a stock so extensive as theirs cannot be closed out in a day, however great the rush. Messrs. Elson understand one of the greatest secrets of success in business—making the prices to suit the market and the times. People will buy where they can get goods cheapest, and a small per cent. on goods sold at once is better than a large per cent. on goods kept on hand for months, at an enormous expense. Give Elson Bros. a call, at 297 Main street.

CONSOLATORY.—The Radical organ of this city consoles itself over the disasters in Ohio and Pennsylvania thus wise:

"The 'low grounds of sorrow' in which the late elections place us will be more than compensated by the joy over the gain it gives us a chance for in the coming Presidential election."

Small favors! "Man never is, but always to be blest." "Distance lends enchantment to the view." Well, the Presidential election may have remote "joy" for the discomforted Radicals, and they will probably make the most of it. Some, however, will have to wade out.

SHAKESPEARE, JR., BECOMES AN INSURANCE AGENT.

How it Happened, Improvements, Etc.

"Junior," said mater familias to me the other day, "Junior," said she, "I have been thinking."

"It is a profitable business," I responded immediately; "it expands the intellect, gives tone and impetus to ideas; it elevates the mind. Without thought all the great discoveries in arts and sciences had never been made. Without thought——"

"Junior," said she, "I have been thinking of you."

"I know it. I could not fail to observe——"

"Junior," said she, "you were born to be a man."

"Beyond the shadow of a doubt; else, how could I ever have had the immodesty to don the habiliaments of the masculine gender? 'It must be so; thou reasonest well.'"

"Junior," said she, "I am old; I cannot live always."

I wept bitterly.

"Junior," said she, "you are my only son."

We embraced tenderly.

"Junior, said she, "will you not throw off this lethargy? Will you not prove your manhood by noble exertion?"

"Behold!" I exclaimed proudly, drawing a package from my pocket, "there is my commission as Insurance Agent, and the improvements I have made upon the noble art.

Mater familias read hastily, laid the papers down in a rapture, clasped me in a warm embrace, imprinted an enthusiastic kiss on my gloomy brow, while our joyful tears mingled.

"Junior," said she, "you are rich; you are immortal; you are my son!"

The scene was intensely effecting.

"Send it to the newspapers," said she; "have it printed; have it patented; sell territory; the United States is your property."

I was deeply moved.

"Already I occupied A. T. Stewart's magnificent residence (all my own) with the fair Celestina Arabella by my side. Already I felt myself soaring through the ethereal elements of popularity, borne upon the wings of the multitude; flashing like a meteor through the sky, a star terrestrial mingling with stars celestial. Oh! it was 'hunkadori.'"

"Junior, my most worthy son," said mater familias, "don't go off into hysterics; take it calmly. You'll feel better for it."

About this time my revered friend and whilom preceptor, Alfred Eaton Evelyn, Esq., entered and joined us in conversation, I produced the important documents, and, after a critical perusal, he pronounced it an humorous production, and advised me to send it to some literary magazine or periodical.

"You should write continually for the press," said Esquire Evelyn; "you would certainly excel in literature. This is an humorous——"

"Humorous?" queried Junior.

"Yes," said Esquire Evelyn, 'it is an humorous production of no ordinary merit. It discovers genius in its author. It betrays an innate conception of the ridiculous."

"Ridiculous?" exclaimed Junior.

"Yes, and, Junior," said he rising to depart, "you do honor to your tutor; I am proud of you. Farewell."

"Junior," said mater familias, "it is manifestly not your province to form a nucleus around which to build up a bulwark; but to improve the structure; not to originate ideas, but to perfect those already formed."

The idea here is original, as are the interrogatories subjoined.

Now, Messrs. editors, in launching out into the broad sea of public opinion, casting my destiny with those who subsist on pomp and circumstance, making mine

"One of the few, the immortal names
That were not born to die,"

I throw myself upon your generosity, and your known regard for the welfare of the outside world.

Truly yours, SHAKSPEARE, JR.

To the Board of Underwriters throughout the World —Greeting:

GENTLEMEN: Having been appointed agent of one of the most extensive and prosperous Life Insurance Companies of the world, and deeming the interrogatories to be propounded to applicants already compiled insufficient, I beg leave to submit the following additional:

My Dear Sir (or Madam): Being now about to obey a solemn injunction of the holy scriptures, which expressly declares that in the midst of life we should prepare for death, it behooves me to state to you that at the time of the translation of the Holy Writ there was but one copy extant, and in that a single passage was obliterated. The translator therefore omitted to mention in what manner the preparation referred to should be made. A wise and discriminating public, however, have universally decided that the preparation alluded to consists chiefly and solely in obtaining a life insurance policy. Which can be had for the moderate sum of ($75 00) seventy five dollars, no cents, at No 22½ blank street. For particulars, see small bills.

Now, therefore, I, Shakspeare, jr., a duly qualified and commissioned insurance agent, in the full possession of all my mental faculties, and in due observance and fulfilment of my duty as your honorable interrogator, must request you to assume a retrospective air, the face somewhat elongated, the oracular peering into dim futurity, the under jaw hanging benignly low, and that useful appendage, known as the hand, supporting the perricranium, while the elbow comes in contact with the knee. In this position you will answer, promptly, the following questions:

Did your grandfather ever reach the age of maturity? If so, state how often and at what age?

Did your grandfather ever commit matrimony? If so, state his motive for so doing; whether he was insane or not starving himself?

Did your grandmother ever raise chickens? If so, at what price did she sell butter and eggs.

What was the state of your father's finances at the time of his marriage, and what has been the decrease since?

Did your parents ever have any children? If so, state how many?

Did the boys have any female affinities? If so, how many?

Is there any fondness for molasses hereditary in your family? If so, how many?

If your parents' children were all the same age how old would your eldest sister be? (Seventeen, of course.)

How long can a maiden linger between sixteen and twenty?

Please state the names of your friend who treats oftenest, his general habits and where he may be found?

Do you take sugar in your's? If so, how many?

Does your father drink ardent spirits? If so, how many? Do they haunt him in his dreams?

Did your father have rheumatism prior to the passage of the conscript law? If so, state his reasons.

Was your father a secessionist at the commencement of the late civil war? If so, where does he reside now?

If the Southern States accept the un-Constitutional amendment now proposed, what effect will it have upon the climate, health and general prosperity of the people? (The answer is plain.)

Which exercises the controlling political influence, your purse or your principles?

What is the politics of the Memphis Bulletin?

What is your opinion of a man who boasts of having a constitution?

TO GENTLEMEN.—These questions are important. Politics have a great deal to do with a man's habits, and, consequently, his health. The "God and morality" party are insured for half price.]

Did you ever have a persuncture on any portion of your person you would not rather have anywhere else? If so, state the location.

Did it ever rain when you were away from shelter without an umbrella?

Did it ever rain when you had one?

Did you ever see ladies "up town" when the streets were muddy?

Were you ever elected to any public office? If so no further questions are necessary—we do not insure the lives of corrupt men.

VICKSBURG, Miss., October 8, 1867.

In consequence of the prevalence of yellow fever in the city of Vicksburg, we feel compelled, by the duty we owe to ourselves, our families and employes, to postpone the second preliminary distribution of the Mississippi Agricultural, Educational and Manufacturing Aid Society from the 16th day of October to the 20 of November, 1867.

To give a reason, until said, bitter experience, at a distance the necessary time for renewal of certificates, the third preliminary distribution will be drawn November 30th, and the grand scheme December 20th, 1867.

We trust that a kind and indulgent public will both excuse and approve of the short postponement.

Correspondents and persons ordering certificates are requested to direct their communications to the Secretary at Meridian, Mississippi, to which place our office is temporarily removed. An authorized agent will remain at Vicksburg to attend to any communications or orders for certificates.

W. D. LYLES, President.
ALBERT SANDEL, Secretary.

The drawing of the School Fund for Vicksburg and Jackson will be postponed from October 24th to November 12th, 1867.

Secretary Board of Health.

INSURANCE.—Ex-Mayor Baugh has, we learn, associated himself with the newly elected officers and directory, as General Agent of the Tennessee State Mutual Fire Insurance company, of this city. As applied to life insurance, the mutual plan has been eminently successful, and we see no good reason why it should not be equally so in fire insurance. As cheap and safe, it is equally deserving public confidence and patronage. The Tennessee is the only mutual fire company in the State. Under the control of gentlemen of undoubted integrity and business experience, and with the assistance that Mr. Baugh will be able to lend in building up the company, we feel safe in predicting for it a success equal to its great prototype, the Home Mutual, of St. Louis. Our property holders, always anxious to economize, should look into this matter of mutual fire insurance. It has attractions for them.

IN MEMORIAM.

D. J. R.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE CONQUERED BANNER."

Young as the youngest who donned the Gray,
True as the truest, that wore it;
Brave as the bravest, he marched away,
(If tot tears on the cheeks of his mother lay,)
Drying them o'er a last one day,
He lies in the front before it.

Firm as the firmest where duty led,
He fronted whatever a foe—
Bold as the boldest he fought and bled,
And the day was won—but the field was red,
And the blood of his fresh young heart was shed
On his country's hallowed altar.

On the trampled breast of the battle plain,
Where the torrentest racks had wrestled,
On his pale, pure face, not a mark of pain,
(His mother dreams they will meet again,)
The foemen form until all the slain,
Like a child asleep—he nestled.

In the solemn shades of the wood that swept
The field where his comrades found him;
They bur-d him there—and the big tears crept
Into strong men's eyes as that had a dozen wept,
(His mother said this her—smiled and slept,
Dreaming her arms were around him.)

A grave in the woods with the grass o'ergrown,
A grave in the heart of a lone mother—
His clay in the one (no lifeless and lone;
There is not a name, (it rests on a stone—
And only the voice of the win s maketh moan
Over the grave where never a flower is strewn,
But his memory lives in the other.

MARRYING A CONVICT.

I had served twenty-five years on board an East Indiaman, and for the last ten years had commanded the Belle, one of the finest crafts that ever floated. I was an old sea dog, who had dwelt so long on salt water that I had almost a hatred of dry land.

On the 30th of October, 1823, I received orders to put myself in readiness to sail for Cayenne. I was to transport seventy-five soldiers and a convict. I had orders to treat this individual well, and the letter I received from the Directory enclosed another, with a huge red seal, which I was not to open until between twenty-seven and twenty-eight west longitude; that is, just before we cross the line.

The letter was a long packet, so well closed upon every side that it was impossible to catch the slightest glimpse of its contents. I am not naturally superstitious, but there was something in the look of the letter that I did not altogether like, though I could give no reason why. However, I carried it into the cabin, and stuck it under the glass of a little shabby English clock, which was fastened above my head.

I was busy fixing the letter under the clock, when, who should come into my cabin but the convict and his wife! This was the first time I had seen either of them, and I may say, that a more prepossessing couple I never met. The woman was scarcely more than fifteen, and as handsome as a picture; while the husband was an intelligent, magnificently formed man, on whose features nature had never written "villian!"

His crime, to be plain, was the misfortune of being a hundred years ahead of his age. He and others had attempted something which our Government called treason, and which it punished with death. It, therefore, occasioned me considerable wonder that he should be placed under my charge. But more of this afterwards.

He had, as I said, his wife hanging upon his arm. She was as merry as a bird; she looked indeed like a turtle dove, cooing and nestling beneath his great wing.

Before a month had passed over our heads, I looked upon them as my own children. Every morning I used to call them into my cabin. The young fellow would sit writing at my table—that is to say, at my chest, which was my bed. He would often help me at reckoning, and soon learned to do better than I could. I was amazed at his ability. His young wife would sit upon one of the round stools in my cabin, industriously working at her needle.

One day we were all three sitting in this way, when I said:

"Do you know, my young ones, as it seems to me, we make a very pretty family picture? Mind, I don't mean to ask questions, but may be you have not much money to spare, and are, both of you, as I think, too handsome to dig in the burning sun of Cayenne, like many a poor wretch of a convict before you. It's a bad country, take my word for it. I, who have roughed through the tempest, wind and sunshine, till I have the skin of a rhinoceros, might get along there; but you—I'm afraid for you. So, if you should chance to have a bit of foolish friendship for your old captain, why, I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll get rid of this old brig; she's not much better than an old tub after all; so I'll settle myself down there with you, if you like. You see I have not a living soul in the world to care for, or that cares for me. I want reciations, I want a home, I want a family. I should like to make my home with you, my pretty ones! What say ye?"

They said nothing at all, but kept looking at each other, and then at me, as if they doubted whether they understood what I said.

At last the little bird threw her arms around my neck and cried like a baby.

"But," said she, suddenly pausing, "you have not looked at the letter with that big red seal."

I felt a queer creeping come over my flesh as she said this.

"Hang it!" I exclaimed, "it had slipped my head entirely."

With a cold, dreaded sensation, I went to my chest to see where we were. I found that we had several days remaining before we should reach the proper longitude for opening the letter.

Well, there we stood, all three of us, looking up to the letter as if it could have spoken to us. As it happened, the sun was shining full upon the glass of the clock case, and fell upon the great staring red seal of the letter. I could not help fancying it looked like a great big monster, an ogre's face, grinning from the middle of the fire; it looked!

"Could not one fancy," said I, to make them laugh, "its great eyes were staring out of its head."

"Ah, my love," said the wife, "it looks like blood."

"Pooh, pooh," said her husband, taking her arm under his, "it looks like a letter or invitation to a wedding. Come, leave the letter alone if it troubles you so. Let's to our room and prepare for bed."

And off they went upon deck, and left me with the beast of a letter. I remember that I kept looking at it as I smoked my pipe; it seemed to fix its great red eye upon mine, fascinating like the eye of a serpent. It was red, wide, raw, staring like the maw of a fierce wolf. I took my great coat and hung it over both clock and letter, and went upon deck to finish my pipe.

We were now in the latitude of the Cape de Verde Islands—the Belle was running before a fair wind at the rate of ten knots an hour. It was a splendid night—the stars large and shining; the moon rising above the horizon, as large as a sun of silver, the line of ocean parting it, and a long stream of pale, shimmering light, falling upon the waves, which, as they broke, sparkled like jewels. I sat upon the deck, smoking my pipe and watching them.

All was quite still, except the footfall of the watch, as he paced the deck—gazing, as I did, upon the shadow of the vessel, stealing over the silent waters.

I love silence and order—I hate noise and confusion. The lights should all have been extinguished by this time; but when I looked upon the deck, I thought I saw a little red hue of light just beneath my feet.

At another time and place this would have made me angry; but knowing that the light came from the cabin of my little deportes, I determined to see what they were about.

I had only to look down—I could see into the cabin through the skylight.

The young girl was upon her knees; she was saying her prayers. A lamp swinging from the ceiling lighted her room. She had on a long white night dress, and her fair golden shining hair floated over her shoulders, and almost touched her two little bare feet, which were peeping from under her white dress, so pretty. I was turning away; but pshaw, said I, I am an old soldier! What matters it? So I stayed.

The husband was sitting upon a little trunk, his head resting between his hands, looking at her as she prayed. She raised her face to heaven and I then saw her large blue eyes filled with tears. She looked like a Madaline. As she arose, he said:

"Ah, my sweet Laurette, as we approach America I cannot help being anxious—I do not know why—but I feel that this voyage has been the happiest part of our lives."

"So it seems to me," she answered; "I only wish it could last forever."

Suddenly clasping his hands in a transport of love and affection, he said:

"And yet, my little angel, I see you always cry when you say your prayers, and that I cannot stand, for I know what causes it, and then I fear you must repent what you have done."

"Repent," she replied, in a sad, rebuking tone. "Repent of having come with you. Do you think because I have been yours only such a very, very short time, that I should not love you? Was I not your wife? How can you be sorry that I should be with you, to live with you if you are to live, and to die with you if you are to die?"

The young man began to sigh, striking the floor impatiently with his feet, while he kissed repeatedly the little hand and arm which she was holding out.

"Ah, Laurette, Laurette! When I think if our marriage had only been delayed five days, that then I should have been arrested and transported alone, I cannot forgive myself."

At this the pretty little one stretched out her pretty little white arms, clasped his head, pressed his forehead, his hair, his eyes, smiling like a cherub, and murmuring all sorts of little woman's fond things. I was quiten ffected, and considered it one of the prettiestscenes I had ever witnessed.

"And besides, we are so very rich—look!" said she, bursting out laughing. "Look at my purse, one gold louis d'or—all my worldly wealth."

He began to laugh too.

"Yes, dear, I have spent my last half crown. I gave it to the fellow who carried our trunk on board."

"Ah, poor," cried she; "what matters it? Nobody so merry as those who have nothing at all; besides I have my two diamond rings that my mother gave me; they are good for something all the world over; we can sell them when you like, and besides I am sure that Captain meant kindly by us, and I suspect that he knows very well what is in that letter. It's a recommendation to the Governor of Cayenne."

"Perhaps so," said he, "who knows?"

"To be sure it is," continued the charming wife. "You are so good I am sure the Government has banished you only for a short time—I know they have no feeling against you."

It was high time that the light should be stricken out, and I now rapped on the deck and called to them to do so.

They instantly obeyed, and I heard them laughing and chattering like two innocent school fellows.

One morning when I woke I was surprised not to feel the slightest motion of the vessel. Hurrying on deck I found we were becalmed. Latitude, one degree north; longtitude, between twenty-seven and twenty-eight degrees west.

I waited until night, when I descended into the cabin. I opened the letter with a dull, awful feeling. I held my breath while I broke the great red seal and read:

"CAPTAIN FONTAINBLEAU: The convict, Antoine Hindsclear, stands convicted of high treason against the Republic. The Directory order that he be shot on mid ocean, and you are hereby instructed to see that these orders are carried into effect."

I read the letter backward and forward. I rubbed my eyes; I could not believe it; my knees smote together. I rose up with a gasp as if I were choaking; I hated myself for my weakness.

Forcing down my emotion, I went on deck. There they were, she looking upon the ocean and he gazing at her with an expression of unutterable fondness. Catching his eye, I signed to him to come into the cabin. Bidding her good bye, he came down, his face all smiles.

I was bathed in a cold sweat; I felt as if deathly sick. I handed him the order, and he read it, together with the death warrant, which was drawn up in due form, and attached. He gathered his voice as he finished.

He colored slightly, and bowed.

"I ask nothing, Captain!" he said in the same gentle tone that always characterized his voice; "no man can be expected to swerve from his duty. I only wish to speak a few words to Laurette, and to entreat you to take care of her, if she should survive—but I hardly think she will."

"All this is fair, my good fellow," said I. "If you request it, I will carry her back to France, to her family. I won't leave her until she wishes to be rid of me; but I do not think she will survive it."

He took my hand and pressed it.

"Most kind captain, I see you suffer more than I do in this business—but there is no help for it. I trust you will preserve what little property of mine is left for her sake, and that you will take care she gets what her poor old mother may leave her. I put her life, her honor, in your hands. She is (and how fondly low his voice became) a delicate little creature—her chest is often affected, she must keep it warm. And if she could keep the two diamond rings her mother gave her, I should be so glad; but, of course, if the money is needed, they must go. My poor Laurette—how pretty she looks."

It was getting too much for me, and I began to knit my brow.

"One word is as good as a thousand," said I. "We two understand one another. Go to her."

I squeezed his hand; he looked wistfully at me, and I added: "Stay a moment, let me give you a word of advice. Don't say a word to her about it. We will settle the thing for her; leave it to me; that's my business. It shall be managed in the best manner."

"Ah!" said he, "I did not understand; yes, much better. Besides this leave taking, this leave taking!"

"Yes," said I, "don't behave like a child; much better, much better. No leave taking, if you can help it, or you are lost."

I kept my seat; I saw them walking arm in arm upon the deck for about half an hour.

I called the mate to me, and when he had read the letter, I said:

"Garley, this is bad business—bad business. I put it into your hands. I obey the orders, but I remain in the cabin till it is over."

"How do you wish the thing done?" he asked in a monchalant manner.

"Take him out in a boat; out of sight; do it as quick as possible; don't say anything of this till the time comes."

Garley sat five minutes looking straight at me without saying a word. He was a strange fellow. I didn't know what to make of him. He then went out of the cabin without saying another word.

Night came at last. I called Garley: "Man a boat; go a quarter of a mile; be quick!"

To obey a slip of paper! for it was but a slip after all. Something in the very air must have driven me on. I saw him. I saw the young man kneel down before his Laurette; kiss her kneel her feet! her gown! I cried out like a madman:

"Part them! part them this instant! Part them—curse the Republic—curse the Directors! I quit the service! curse the lawyers! you may tell them if you will."

She was dragged into her berth, and the boat rowed away in the darkness.

Some time after, a dull volley came over the sea to the vessel. It was all over.

Fool, madman, how I paced the deck, and cursed myself. All night long I paced back and forth, and all night long I heard the moaning of the poor striken bird.

Often I halted, and was tempted to throw myself into the sea, and so end this horrid torture of the brain and heart.

Days passed. I saw nothing of Laurette. I would not see her. She avoided me and I was glad of it. I could not bear the sight of that woestricken face.

The mate Garley, how I hated him! He was as cool and unconcerned as though he had no remembrance of shooting the poor wretch.

At Cayenne, I resigned my ship. Going to the city, I made all arrangements, and took the steamer for New York. I placed ample funds in the hands of a trusty friend, and told him to send Laurette to me at the end of six months. I could not see her until grief had lost its edge.

Weary, careless of my fate, I wandered into the interior of the State of New York, and finally purchased a little place, where I hoped I should lie down and die.

I sent for Laurette. Poor bird, I must see her. I could wait no longer.

One summer night I sat in the porch of my house, smoking my pipe and gazing down the road. Soon the rumble of wheels was heard, and the stage halted.

The next moment a pair of white arms were around my neck, and the heart of the sobbing Laurette was upon my bosom.

"Oh! you dear, excellent Captain."

"Heavens! who is that behind you?"

There stood the fine manly form of Antoine Hindsclear, the convict.

"What does this mean?" I demanded, hardly knowing whether I was dreaming or awake.

"Are you glad to see me?"

"Thank God!" was all that I could ejaculate.

I soon understood it all. The mate, Garley, had read my heart better than I did myself. After leaving the brig in the boat, he arranged the whole affair. The volley was fired, but no bullet touched Antoine Hindsclear. He was smuggled into his berth again, and took good care to avoid my sight. The whole crew were in the plot, and, thank God, I was duped.

I sent Garley a thousand dollars as a reward.

I am an old man; but I am happy. My children and my grandchildren (I call them nothing else) seem to think old Captain Fontainbleau is not such a wretch after all.

Notice to the Public.

IN retiring from the Drug business in this city we would give notice that we have sold our entire stock, together with the Fixtures, Lease, etc., of the well known stand, No. 318 Main street, to Dr. J. R. WASSON & CO., to whom we were formerly associated; and after returning our heartfelt thanks to our numerous patrons and friends who have so liberally favored us during our continuation of business, we solicit for our successors a continuance of the same. As to the character and qualifications of our worthy successors in this branch of trade, their reputation is too well and favorably known in this city and throughout the country generally for us to take any pains in saying we might here make to said therein. Suffice it to say, they are of long and liberal experience in this branch of business, and therefore and cordially recommend a continuance of our patrons with this house.

JOHN A. NIPGEN.

The unsettled business of NIPGEN & REAKIRT and JOHN A. NIPGEN will be settled by either of the partners at the old stand.

JOHN A. NIPGEN,
NIPGEN & REAKIRT.

To the Public.

In having made the above purchase and remained business at the old and well known stand, No. 318 Main street, we are we have so often and for so many long years so unsatisfactorily and advantageously our old friends and patrons; and at a time of unforeseen providential circumstances have shifted us around to our former place of business, it is with feelings of earnest and gratulation that we ar- again prepared to offer to our former pat ns and the public generally a large and well selected st k of Drugs, Medicines, etc., etc., and, indeed, everything usually found in a first class and well conducted Drug Store, to which we are now receiving and will continue to add constantly, fresh supplies of the most staple and choice articles the markets can afford. And as we shall import from French ports direct, and from first hand dealers, we intend making this House "the Drug emporium of the south," we would, therefore, solicit the orders and patronage of Merchants, Physicians and Retail Dealers in the city and country, to give us a call, and assure and price our Stock before purchasing elsewhere, for we are determined by our close vigilance of the markets of the world to equip ourselves as well as with sound, practical judgment in making our purchases, so as to be able, with the combination of quality of our Stock and the low prices we will offer them at, to be able to vie with any, and even defy competition. Anxiously hoping, from the first three propositions (for we intend to make good in the letter all we have proposed), will meet with the hearty concurrence of our old friends and patrons and the community generally. We are very respectfully yours etc.

J. R WASSON & CO.,
Proprietors.

To the Business Men, Merchants and officers of Memphis.

THE Fall Trade will soon open; you will have large stocks of merchandise to dispose of, and you must let the people know it. The columns of the NORTH ALABAMIAN are indispensable to North Alabama through which to extend your trade. The large and increasing trade of this section can be secured, to a great degree, by making your business known, and offering as favorable inducements as other cities.

If our terms are reasonable, and we will guarantee you will be benefitted by availing yourselves of the use of the ALABAMIAN'S columns to make your business known. Address your orders to

COE'S DYSPEPSIA CURE.

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR ALL

DISEASES OF THE STOMACH

IS the discovery of the inventor of COE'S valuable Cough Balsam, which, after testing for his own health, it cured a lamp in the Stomach for him which before had yielded to nothing but chloroform.

The almo t daily testimony from various parts of the country assures me here there is no disease caused by a disordered stomach it will not speedily cure.

PHYSICIANS INDORSE AND USE IT

Ministers Give Testimony of its Efficacy!

And from all directions we receive tidings of cu

Dyspepsia!
Heartburn!
It is sure to cure;
One dose will cure.
Sick-Headache!
It has cured in hundreds of case
Headache and Dizziness!
It stops in thirty minutes.
Acidity of the Stomach!
It corrects at once
Rising of the Food!
It stops immediately.
Distress after Eating!
One dose will remove.
Cholera Morbus!
Rapidly yields to a few doses.
Bad Breath!
Will be changed with half a bottle

IT IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS!

Its unprecedented success is owing to the fact that it cures by assisting nature to re-assert her sway in the system.

Nearly every dealer in the United States sells it at ONE DOLLAR PER BOTTLE.

LEGAL.

Trustee's Sale.

BY virtue of a deed of trust to me executed by John H. Waggoner, on the twenty-ninth day of June, 1867, which deed is of record in the Register's office of Shelby county, in book No. 6, pages 175, 176 and 177, to secure to Hiram A. Partee the prompt payment at maturity of a promissory note therein specified, and to indemnify said Partee as therein and now, therefore, by virtue of the power in me vested by said deed of trust, I will, on Tuesday, the twenty-ninth of October, 1867, between the hours of eleven a. m. and two p. m., at the court house door, Greenlaw block, in the city of Memphis, proceed to sell to the highest bidder for cash, the property in said deed conveyed and described thus: Beginning at the northeast corner of the No. 18, in sub-division C, in the partition of the estate of A. B. Carr, at a stake in the Pigeon Roost road, north 16 degrees, east 16 links from a poplar marked C, and thence south 30 chains 91 links to a stake, south 1 degree, west 10½ links from a poplar marked H, thence north 36½ degrees, west 1 chains 8 links to P. Heistand's line, thence north 36½ chains 61 links to the Pigeon Roost road, thence with said road, east 36½ degrees, east with said road 7 chains 70½ links to the beginning, containing about fourteen acres. The above metes and bounds is intended to be that portion of Carr's estate, and is a portion of the land described in the deed of J. P. Caruthers to Samuel Macfield, recorded in book 41, part second, page 336, and described in the deed from Samuel Macfield, Mary B. Macfield and T. W. Robertson to H. A. Montgomery, in book 38, part second, page 336, embracing a splendid residence, known as the "Macfield Place."

TERMS CASH. This belief is to be good, but I convey only as trustee. The equity of redemption is waived.

ROBERT J. MATTHEWS, Trustee.
